MOSELEY'S TUBULAR WROUGHT IRON

ARCH BRIDGES AND ROOFS. THESE Bridges and Roofs have now been fully tested.
In this vicinity, and it is universally conceded that they cannot be excelled. The Roofs are wholly of Wrought Iron, or mixture of Wood and Iron; Sheeting always Iron.

The Bridges are wholly Wrought Iron except the floor, which is wood, like the floors of ordinary Bridges. We are prepared to make these structures in any quantities, at prices about as follows:

Railroad Bridges, 50 feet span, 8,000 lbs, $17 50 per foot lineal.

Common Road or Turnpike, 50 feet span, 2,600 lbs., $5 75 per foot lineal.

Roofs, all iron, 50 feet width of building, $25 per 100 square feet, part wood and part iron, from $12 to $20 square feet, part wood and part iron, from $12 to $20 per square.

Increase of span of bridges or width of buildings makes an increase of price, but the increase in price is no more than the increase of wooden structures.

We can furnish Iron of every size to work into Bridges and Roofs, and Railroads or other companies buying the right to use them and the iron of us, can make their own structures one third less than the above prices. Our structures weigh only irom 14 to 1-10 that of wood; difference in freight in a long distance buys our work. In a few days we will have at our Factory, 497 West Third street, in this city, four different specimens of our Roof, where the public can inspect them to their satisfaction. We beg them to give us a call, as all our work is warranted, and we ask no pay on ordinary jobs until the work is done and approved, payments being secured on contracting. From the many recommendations of this Work we are only room for the following: From Rev. Dr. Tefft, late President of Gennessee Col-Gentlemen:—Having made a particular examination of Goodrich's 'History of All Nations,' I am free to say, that I know of no work, great or small, that contains half the amount of useful and entertaining matter for family reading. It is written in Mr. Goodrich's best tyle. It is a library, a historical library of itself; and it is worth, according to the usual cost of good reading, two or three times the money you ask for it. It is no wonder that you have to keep a power press running constantly to supply the orders for these volumes; for the public have only to know their value to make them a universal want with all classes.

I am, gentlemen, most respectfully yours,

I think it eminently deserving of the public patronage. It is necessarily brief; but it brings under review, with its admirable illustrations, the principal subjects worthy of attention in all nations, and to the young especially, it is invaluable.

I have been familliar with Mr. Goodrich's writings for many years, and have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with him; and think him admirably qualified for imparting instruction in a way that brings it within the reach of the common mind.

Lecompton was constitution, but we do not believe this will subscribed, the said corporators may call a meeting of the subscribers, for the purpose of electing ten Directors of said company. At such meeting each share of stock, upon which the sum of one dollar shall have been paid, shall entitle the holder to one vote; and at all subsequent meetings of the company each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for each share of stock held by him, upon which all the instalments, called by the Board of Directors as hereinafter provided, have been paid.

§ 4. The annual meeting of the stockholders shall be held on the first Mondays of May in each year, and in the city of Frankfort; but called meetings may be held at any time, upon a call signed by the Directors, or by any number of stockholders representing one fifth (in value) of the stock of said company, two weeks notice of the time and place of such called meeting having first been given in the newspapers published, respectively, in the cities of Louisville, Frankfort, Harrodsburg, Danville, Richmond, and Lexington. To ascertain the amount of said net annual revenue, a certain the amount of said net annual revenue, a We publish below, by request, the act of the Legislature to charter the "Kentucky River Navigation Company," and we are requested to state that a general meeting will be called in a short time to take efficient steps to organize the company, and the state. The court shall ascertain the net income from said locks and dams during each of the past five years, and the average amount rethe past five years, and the average amount re-ceived during each shall be the rent to be paid the State by said company. Should the said company, at any time, fail to pay the same at the time when it is properly due, the President of the Board of Internal Improvements shall enter upon and take possession of all the works of said company, and of the locks and dams already built, and shall hold the same on behalf of the State until all arrears of rent are paid.

§ 7. The Directors of said company shall make semi-annual dividends of its profits; but not until the improvements contemplated in this act shall be completed as high up as the mouth of Middle Fork. Until the works shall be so completed the net profits of the company shall be applied to the prosecution of its works.

From the Philadelphia Press, of Friday 17th. A Douglas Organ on Lecomptonism.

We have never known a party to be more sig-nally routed and demoralized than the traitors to Democratic pledges and principles who espoused the cause of Lecompton, "pure and simple".
There was something so outrageous and tyrannical in the attempt to force a government upon the people of an inchoate American State against their will, that it has been indignantly condemn-ed by the patriotic sentiment of the whole country, and has become as "obsolete" an idea as feudalism. The vote of the people of Kansas convinced the whole nation of the justice of the representations of the antagonists of Lecompton, and presented those who had advocated that instrument in a most unenviable light.

But the organs of the Administration still have the audacious folly to prate of the English bill as a "finality," and to boast that if they could not heap insult and wrong upon the people of Kansas for the high crime of preferring free to slave institutions, by dragging them into the Union against their will, they can at least have the satisfaction of keeping them out of the Union for a time, on the plea of insufficient population.

sage, publicly announce, wherever they address the people, their determination to disregard its provisions. For all practical purposes, there are none so poor as to do reverence to the English bill in the North-not even its own authors. may be, indeed, that these Congressional candi dates are insincere in their professions. we think probable. Having been false to their constituents once, they may be false again.

It is certain that they would cheat somebody either the South, which relies upon their ad herence to the restrictive principle which they endorsed by voting for the English bill, or the North, to which they now proclaim their deter-mination to admit Kansas without reference to population. But, for the present, we speak of a victory gained, because nowhere in the North FALL & WINTER CLOTHING can there be found any considerable body of men

It is true that the official guillotine is at work doing its best to secure that "uniformity of opinwhich the Union considers particularly de sirable, and head after head is chopped off to at tain this object. But the old woman who attempted to mop up the ocean with her broom made about as sensible an adaptation of means to the end desired, as the officials who seem to imagine that the proscription of the independent spirits in their service can change the honest litical convictions of the American people.

The Lecomptonites argue that, inasmuch as the votes polled at the late Kansas election are nearly equal to the votes of the ordinary Con-gressional districts of the country, her population must be nearly equal to that required by the English bill. They forgot that Kansas is settled, to a great extent, by young or adventurous men. many of whom are unmarried, or have left their families in their old homes until they could provide new ones for them. The proportion of women and children to the number of voters is much smaller in Kansas than in any old settled community. So that a considerable time must yet elapse before Kansas will possess a popuation of 93,000, and if her admission is de layed beyond 1860, the ratio will be about 120,

But these very same Congressmen who have voted for the restriction in the English bill will be called upon, at the next session, to vote upon the admission of Oregon, and although she has a less population than Kansas, we presume she will be admitted. Why, then, should an unjust discrimination be enforced against the Territory of Kansas, and men be punished and proscribed because they will not, "like scurvy politicians," get "glass eyes," through which they can see a reason why a slave State should require a less

Hon. Thomas Corwin.

A few weeks ago we copied some extracts from a speech made by this gentleman in Ohio, in which he declared that he was opposed to exern Democratic editors to keep up the slavery agitation by representing the Republican party as being engaged in a crusade against the rights of the South, we have been severely condemned by some of our Democratic cotemporaries for our remarks upon Corwin, and have been placed in a false position by them. We repeat everything we have said concerning him, and reiterate our sincere desire that he may be sent to Congress. If the country had many men in Congress equal to Corwin in patriotism or ability, we should have less of rash and reckless legislation for partisan purposes, and more of statesmanship and manli-

It is well known that Gen. Taylor's cabinet were opposed to the Compromise measures of 1850, and that through their influence they were defeated. But when Fillmore came into office, he and his cabinet strenuously urged the passage of the different bills, and through their exthe principle of popular sovereignty incorporated ed. The Democrats have since taken up those measures, and now swear by them as a funda- change in the tone of the Democratic press toa zealous advocate of these bills at the time of more of his principles than he does of the organi Col. Fremont as a less dangerous man than the author of the Ostend Manifesto; for as he considered that Fillmore had no chance for an election, his choice was between Fremont and Buchanan. In like manner many who preferred Fillmore and despised the Democratic creed, voted for Buchanan as the best man to defeat Fremont. We do not approve of the philosophy of either plied with. In a late speech, he said: of these classes, but would have preferred voting for the only good man in the field and for the only correct principles, and letting the evils take care of themselves. Mr. Corwin was as much opposed to the principles upon which Mr. Fremont made the race, as many Whigs who voted for Buchanan were to portions of the Democratic

He now declares that it is a matter of supremindifference to him whether or not he is regarded as a Republican. He announces his own principles, and boldly says that if the Republicans have views other than those proclaimed by him he does not-want their votes. He stands upon the old Henry Clay Whig doctrines in reference to the question of slavery in the States and Territories, and we are ready to stand there with him in opposition to Northern Republicans, Squatter Sovereignty Democrats, and Southern fireeaters. He says that if the Republican platform contains anything on the question of slavery that was not in the old Whig platforms, then he is not a Republican. Could a Southern Whig or American ask for more?

Mr. Corwin is in favor of enforcing the proions of the Fugitive Slave Law, as he was in favor of its passage, and was denounced by Abo- a willingness to go to the United States Senate nage dues to beacons, lighthouses, &c. litionists in the North for standing by it and the in the place of Douglas. This is carrying out other pacificatory measures of 1850. When a the Administration plan of warfare against the Territory applies for admission into the Union as a State, he is in favor of the admission of the Territory making such application with or without slavery, as the majority of her people, undisturbed by fraud or violence, may determine. In the case of a Territory whose local laws already protect slavery, where the institution now exists, and whose people desire to retain slavery amongst them, he does not believe in the right of 1752. Congress to abolish those laws or to impair the right of property of the master in his slaves. But he is opposed to the extension of slavery into free Territory, whose local laws do not sanction it, whose people do not desire but detest the institution, where it never has existed and where Magazine may be had at KEENON & CRUTCHERS there is no necessity for its existence; in other words, he is opposed to the doctrine which makes the Federal Constitution a great instrument for the propagandism of slavery, which forces it the laws have prohibited slavery and the people down. cherish a deadly hostility to the institution; he says that in such an instance he would enforce continued as Territory, and would not permit the Southern man to carry his slaves among people who hated slavery-in other words, he would exclude slavery from free Territory. If these positions are not entirely conservative they, as near it as we ever expect a Northern man to come; and they can result in no practical harm, as few

Mr. Corwin has always been violently opposed to the annexation of more territory, until it is rendered unavoidable by the exigencies or overflowing population of the nation. He is not opposed to the necessary acqusition of slave territory merely because slavery is recognized by its people, but there is no slave Territory which he thinks it necessary to annex. And we agree with him in this position, as there is no slave Territory which we could annex except Cuba, and for many reasons we would be opposed to the acquisition of that island. These are Mr. Corwin's views as we have understood them, and as such we present them to our readers. If there is anything in them distasteful to Southern
